ELSC seeks to reach out to those who are interested in the impacts of brain sciences research and are directly influenced by it.

One important component of ELSC's vision is to maintain a dialogue between scientists and the general public. ELSC seeks to reach out to those who are interested in the impacts of brain sciences research and are directly influenced by it. By holding public lectures and hosting temporary exhibitions on the brain, and by reaching out to children and youth of different ages, the Edmond and Lily Safra Center for Brain Sciences renders brain research accessible to all who are interested.
